Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from Memoir of Charles Wentworth Upham Charles Wentworth Upham, though he was not born within the limits of the United States, had every other claim to its full and honored citizenship. Here he passed all but the early boyhood of his life; and here, in several forms of high service, he discharged a larger variety of trusts than is often assigned to the most favored of those born on our soil. He came of a family among the original English Colonists of Massachusetts Bay. A line of five generations between his first ancestor here and himself gives us the names of those who were trusted and serviceable in all the ordinary and emergent offices, calling for able and faithful men, in the development of communities and States. The first of the family in Massachusetts was John Upham. His gravestone, in the old burial-ground of the town of Maiden, implies that he was born in England, in 1597, near the close of the reign of Queen Elizabeth. He emigrated hither at the age of thirty-eight, with wife and children, and settled at Weymouth. He was admitted a freeman - signifying his being in church covenant - Sept. 2, 1, 1635; and was repeatedly deputy or representative from that town in the General Court. Before the year 1650, he had removed to Maiden; serving the town and the court as selectman and commissioner, and in the municipal trusts then committed to the worthiest citizens. He died in 1681, aged eighty-four; having been for twenty-four years a deacon of the church. A son of John Upham, who would seem to have been the first of his children born in the...
