Not illustrated. 1920 Excerpt: . . . were grouped and every effort made to follow the method of treatment with scrupulous care. Apparatus was hard to obtain. For a while the intermittent instillation by syringe was the best that could be done. Later a dozen and a half of graduated bottles were obtained. Rubber tubing supplied when Carrel-Dakin tubing was requested was of the soft, flimsy, black variety, practically useless for getting accurate results. This hospital has never been able to get proper Carrel-Dakin tubing on requisition. That which was used was salvaged from the dressings of incoming wounded patients. This had been boiled and reboiled a number of times. At no time could Forms 55K be obtained, and only since late in December was it possible to obtain paper from the medical supply. Such forms were made by mimeograph on paper purchased at Verdun. One form was filled out for each operation and given to the registrar, after a copy was made on the field medical card. Shortage of paper and forms has made it most difficult to care for the histories properly. In addition to this, there were no blank field medical cards on hand at any time, and the thin, flimsy, mimeographed folds of paper have been easily made worthless by much handling. No envelopes for the protection of these records were obtainable. For these reasons such records have necessarily been poor. Base Hospital 56 was designated as the contagious hospital of the center. From the very inception,...
