Excerpt: . . . 11 The results in 2004 certainly demonstrate the importance and need for continuing and adequately funding the state-side LWCF: 572 local and state park and recreation areas were enhanced with grants, and 420 of the sites benefited from entirely new recreational facilities; 87 new parks and recreation areas were created, including picnic areas, fitness trails, playing fields to accommodate youth participation in baseball, basketball, football and soccer; 645 locations helped by LWCF encouraged active participation to strengthen the health and vitality of Americans. The Presidents budget request also woefully underfunds the Federal acquisition program for our national wildlife refuges, parks, forests, and monuments. The Nat-ural Resources Inventory estimates 2. 2 million acres are lost to development each year; once lost, these lands can never be recovered. We must not lose our significant national historical and cultural heritage. When Congress created the Land and...
