PREFACE No Welsh boy can well read the history of his ancestors-- so stirring a record of so stubborn a race, such a good, grim, fighting race--without feeling that it is good to be a Cymro. And once he feels that he will go on to feel that it is good to be a Briton, too, claiming a share in the glory of that crown and kingdom which was first founded by Cunedda the Burner, who was founder, too, of the Cymric nation. No Welsh boy need ever again go to the history of other peoples for a record of stirring deeds and struggles. It would be hard to match in any history the long and splendid struggle of his own ancestors. OWEN RHOSCOMYL. Arthog, May 24, 1905. LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS PAUK The Crowning Of Henry Tudor . . .
