[.]Nature s high bounds-by thee, and by despair. Yes, the despair which bids a father groan, And cry, my children are no longer mine. The blood within those veins may be mine own, But, tyrant, their polluted souls are thine. I curse thee, though I hate thee not. O slave! If thou could st quench the earth consuming hell Of which thou art a demon, on thy grave This curse should be a blessing. Fare thee well. Sad as it is to contemplate any human being in his agony making use of such language to another; and however much we may sympathize with the poet, yet we cannot but have inwardly a feeling of rejoicing; for, if it had not been for this unheard of villainy, we should probably never have had the other magnificent poetry and prose of Percy Bysshe Shelley composed during his self-imposed ostracism, and which furnish such glorious thoughts for the philosopher, and keen trenchant[.].
